ABOUT THE SEMINAR:

The New Education Policy 2020 seeks to establish autonomous, self-governing higher education institutions with a tradition of excellence and innovation. In order to foster an institutional culture of excellence, involvement with their local communities, and the highest standards of financial probity and accountability, self-governing institutions with Graded autonomy will need leadership of the greatest caliber. Young faculty members need to develop their administrative and leadership skills as well as their capacity to handle difficult situations in addition to their high academic qualifications.

The Seminar is about improving faculty teaching, training, communication, and leadership abilities. The Seminar programme gives participants the chance to prepare for and get an understanding of the evolving duties and responsibilities of teachers.

KEY OBJECTIVES OF THE SEMINAR:

The key objectives of this seminar include:

1. Encourage academia to assume more leadership positions in Higher Education Institute.
2. To encourage teachers to establish a culture of leadership.
3. To exchange top strategies for fostering institutional and individual growth.
4. To provide insightful and useful feedback, to hone the tactics, and to create a "Roadmap" to improve the ranking position, recognition, accreditation, and grading procedure.
5. To raise awareness of the effects of NEP 2020 among educators, students, officials, and other stakeholders in the higher education system.
